SCIENCE CENTER ANNOUNCES 2017 SPRING SLEEPOVER SCHEDULE

NEW THEMES PROMISE SCIENCE FUN FOR EVERYONE

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20, 2017 — Visitors who love Carnegie Science Center don't have to let the sun go down on science fun. The Science Center's Spring Sleepover schedule offers science fans the chance to experience a night at the museum.

Science Sleepovers are a great opportunity for family bonding time or for Scout troop and other organizations to enjoy a group activity.

New themes for 2017 include Science that Glows, and girls-only and boys-only Invention Night challenges.

All Science Center sleepovers include access to four floors of exhibits, special themed activities, an Omnimax movie, a planetarium or laser show, a live theater show, and a science workshop. Once it's time for bed, participants might get to camp out alongside R2-D2 or catch some ZZZs near a space station.

Sleepovers are just $39 per person and include a late-night snack and continental breakfast, and free admission for the day following the sleepover. Spring dates and themes for 2017 are:
